Russell A. Strong was a navigator for the 367th Squadron, serving at Thurleigh from 15 June to 26 November 1944. Included in this time span was five weeks assigned to Group Intelligence. After his discharge he earned BA & MA degrees, became a newspaper editor, but spent most of his career as a University Relations officer on several campuses. He retired in 1988 as Director of Research and a Senior Development Officer from Western Michigan University. He and his wife have five sons.

He became secretary of the 306th Association upon its formation, and has also been historian, and editor of 306th Echoes.
